MINISTRY & LIFE PERSPECTIVES

Humanae Vitae, CRISPR, and Stewardship of Life

“But the most remarkable development of all is to be seen in humanity’s stupendous progress in the domination and rational organization of the forces of nature to the point that we are endeavoring to extend this control over every aspect of our own lives —over the body, over the mind and emotions, over social life, and even over the laws that regulate the transmission of life.”

These words appear near the beginning of Saint Pope Paul VI’s encyclical, Humanae Vitae (“Of Human Life”), published on July 25, 1968 – now fifty-three years ago. It is perhaps most remembered for its promotion of Natural Family Planning and openness to life, but that is just one consequence of its ennobling vision of humans as co-creators with God, entrusted by the Maker of all with this stewardship of the very sources of human life, and the profoundly holy vocation to parenthood. Thanks to all who are parents for accepting this witness to generosity in love and life.

Over the years, Pope Paul’s teaching has often been described as “prophetic.” This is true in two ways. First, in Scriptural terms, “prophetic” simply means that the speaker is conveying not merely human words, but the Word of God. In this sense, Pope Paul’s encyclical is prophetic: he is teaching from his responsibility to hand on God’s wisdom, guided by the Holy Spirit, about the transmission of human life. He knew it would not be welcomed by some: “It is to be anticipated that perhaps not everyone will easily accept this particular teaching. There is much clamorous outcry against the voice of the Church, and this is intensified by modern means of communication. But it comes as no surprise ...like [Jesus] to be a ‘sign of contradiction.’” (HV, 18).

Second, the more common use of “prophetic” implies looking into the future, predicting accurately what is to come. In this sense, too, Pope Paul’s words have proved prophetic. Re-read the opening quote and consider CRISPR. This is a gene-editing technique discovered less than a decade ago. It mimics, but is now able to some degree to control, the same process bacteria have always used naturally to combat viruses that invade the cell.

“CRISPR” stands for “clustered regularly-interspaced short palindromic repeats” – a phenomenon at the level of cellular DNA discovered by accident and considered meaningless. In fact, these “repeats” are sections of DNA that has been damaged by a virus and where the cell “cuts out” the foreign DNA and repairs itself. This process has happened for millennia in our cells, unknown to us. Now, the technology exists to alter DNA relatively simply at will. While there is great positive potential for therapies, the ethical implications of this capability are also sobering, and governments worldwide are wrestling with what boundaries to draw. (For more on CRISPR, consider reading The Code Breaker by Walter Isaacson, recounting the history and very current implications of what science can achieve.)

In 1968, Pope Paul foresaw the consequences of the loss of perspective that would occur when the gift of life – co-created by spouses cooperating with the Creator in accord with the natural means God established – was reduced to a merely biological problem to be solved by technology. As he notes, our capabilities to impact human nature must always be at the service of the human person’s authentic good, even beyond this earthly life.

Humanae Vitae has generated much controversy over the years, but the document itself is a beautiful and realistic affirmation of the dignity of marriage, the challenging vocation of parenthood, and the gift that each person is – beginning as a child – made in the very image of God. In a world marked by so much indifference to human dignity, violence, and debate around our identity as men and women, it is instructive and inspiring to turn back the page to an earlier time when these issues were just emerging in our culture, and hear again the voice of the Holy Spirit guiding the Church to navigate these issues.

STEWARDSHIP

When your life has ended
God will not ask you how much time you spent working.
He won't ask if you used your talents to make your life easier.

He won't ask if you amassed a large fortune.
He won't ask how much "stuff" you accumulated.

He will ask if you spent time helping others.
He will ask if you shared your talents with your parish and community.
He will ask if you used your treasure to support your parish and community.

If you have lived a life of Stewardship you will have used your Time, Talent and Treasure in a way that is pleasing to God. And He will say,

"Well done my good and faithful servant." Mt 25:23

REST IN PEACE

Remember in your prayers the family of Alma Yamry who passed away July 13, from St. Stephen.
Eternal Rest grant unto her.

BANNS OF MARRIAGE

- III Sarah Lentner & Jacob Hilsabeck (ML)

It's All in the Basket

St. Therese of Lisieux made a point of going the extra mile in kindness towards those people who really got under her skin. It was part of her own brand of Everyday Stewardship — thanking God for all His creation, even the parts with which, in her own humanness, she struggled to cope.

I think about this a lot when I challenge myself to give thanks for things that bother me and people who challenge me. When I do this, I envision Christ giving thanks over those insufficient loaves. How many of us would see that paltry little basket and kick a rock in frustration because we can't feed all our people? "You didn't give me enough, Lord! You didn't give me enough patience, enough money, enough creativity, enough stamina to be a good steward. If you had given me more, I could also give more!"

In those moments of despair, we need to take a good look at the life God has given us. We need to look at the trials and the challenges and the shortcomings. The hopes that didn't pan out, the disappointments that keep cropping up.
Somewhere therein lies what we need to be the steward God asks us to be, just as St. Therese's own stewardship was defined by the people she simply couldn't stand.

God does not give us all we want. He does not give us all we ask for. He does us one better: He gives us all we need. It's all in the basket.
— Tracy Earl Welliver, MTS

CONSTRUCTION UPDATE

We are happy to announce we have completed our new roof construction project. We have had some really amazing crews who worked on this project and they were able to get the project done sooner than expected. We consulted with Miller Architects and Builders who received bids for the work; vendors were chosen after consultation with members of the Finance and Pastoral Councils. We would like to thank the firms who served us so well. Braun Intertec came in with infrared cameras to identify root causes and propose fixes. Quad City Roofing had four crews on site and were able to get the roof completed in a timely manner. Intex Insulating was an integral part of improving insulation in the roof and in the correct locations. R&H Drywall did an amazing job fixing the interior portions of the building that had water damage. Virnig Painting came in and covered all the new drywall, matched the paint and has the building looking 100% again. ReStore Tech did a fantastic job of going through the indoor space and cleaning after the dust had settled (literally.) And last, but not least, we would like to thank Miller Architects and Builders for their guidance and expertise. This project was a big one in our eyes and Miller truly made the process as easy as possible. We are pleased with the outcome of the project and equally pleased with the people that came into our building (or onto our building) to do the work. We are even more pleased to let you know that through your stewardship and foresight, Sacred Heart has the funds in reserve to pay for the project's total costs of $233,109. Lastly, thank you to all of you for being patient during this time of construction. The AV upgrade is installed and being used in the church space and that too has been covered by dedicated donations.

Stop the silence – Make It OK

Mental illnesses are a touchy subject, creating voids in conversation. Here are some tips to help you.

- Stop the silence. If someone shares with you that they're experiencing a mental illness, they are opening up to you in a big way. Ask questions, show concern and avoid awkward silences.
- Be nice. It sounds simple enough, but try to say the right things with openness, warmth and caring.
- Listen. In your conversation, try to do more listening and less searching for a solution.
- Keep in contact. Offer to be available by phone, text, email or meet up in person. Just be there.
- Don't ignore it. Don't be afraid to ask about someone's well-being if you think they might be hurting. Trust your judgment.
- Offer support. Everyone is different, and may want very specific help or no help at all. Either way, ask and be open to the answer.
